DOZEN GROSBEAKS SEEN

AT TAFTVILLE SCHOOL

Unusual Birds for This Section, as They Seldom Come East of the Mississippi.

On Monday at the Wequonnoc school there was a visit from a dozen evening grosbeaks, birds which are variely seen east of the Mississippi, thus being 1,000 miles out of their habitual zone. It was fully twenty years ago that the last record of any being seen here was made, though of course others may have been in this vicinity.

The birds belong in western Canada but during the winter they come into the northwestern part of the United States, but seldom come east. They, however, seemed perfectly at home and were probably taking a tour of the New England states and took a liking to this particular section. These birds are eight inches long, being an inch longer than a bluebird and two inches shorter than a robin. These were quite tame, if being possible to get within 25 feet of them. They may have been a portion of a flock which had wandered away from their accustomed haunts, but the treat was an unusual one for those who saw them.

the telephone exchange in this city for the past four years, Miss Panny Nich-ols resigned Sunday morning, though in reality it was Mrs. Frederick At-wood who had completed her duties there. Miss Nichols has been an effi-cient telephone operator and her ser-vices there will be missed.

With her resignation came the announcement of her marriage to Frederick Atwood, operator for the New Haven road at the local station. Their marriage took place Dec. 2, 1910, at New London, but was known only to a few intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Atwood will reside at the bride's home, No. 73 Thames street, having the best wishes of their many friends.

There have been other changes at the local exchange, H. K. Reid of Winsted having taken the place of J. J. McNamara as wire chief here. As night operator to succeed Mrs. Atwood, nee Nichols, Miss Jennie Hunt, formerly a local operator here, has been appointed and she has taken up her duties.

The February session of the civil superior court with a jury comes in at New London this morning, when the cases of Richards appeal from probate, McMahon admr., vs. the New Haven road, and Covello, admr., vs. the Connecticut company, are assigned for trial.

AT THE AUDITORIUM.

Vaudeville and Motion Pictures. forth plenty of applause from the good sized audiences on Monday. The opening number by Michael and Miss Brighteyes, a small dog, is an entertaining one and the clever tricks of Miss Brighteyes win a place in the hearts of the audience. The classy juggling of A. L. Street & Co, is of the highest standard, being especially excellence in the manipulation of the billiard balls. The handling of from three to six is the feature. Walters & Violet in their comedy sketch. On the Park Bench, cannot fail to bring laughter from the most obdurate pessimist and for a topliner of real class few have anything on the offering of Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Friel, At Economy Junction. Excellent photoplays before and after the vaudeville numbers complete a bill that is seldom surpassed. The moving pictures are well selected and form an interesting part of the entertainment.

Carried Out in Several Grades Ad-

Mt. Pleasant Street School.
Grades VIII. and IX.; teachers, Miss G. L. Ward, Miss I. M. Crawford, Miss M. M. Perkins. Song, Columbus, school; Lincoln, Roy Beard; O Captain, My Captain! Anna Burke; Nomination of Lincoln, Mary Coughlin; Lincoln's First Inauguration, Annie Sadinsky; song, Star Spangled Banner, school; Lincoln's Thoughtfulness for Others, Fannie Lewis; Anecdotes and Latters of Lincoln, Lena Tuber, Arline Fields, Vera Stetson, Bertha Weinstein, Irene Welch, May Diffley;

Others, Fannie Lewis; Anecdotes and Letters of Lincoln, Lena Tuber, Arline Fields, Vera Stetson, Bertha Weinstein, Irene Walch, May Diffley; song, Hail, Columbia, school; Second Inaugural Address, Robert Stevens; The Perfect Tribute, Elizabeth Fitzgerald; Abraham Idncoln, Matilda Beetham, Fannie Slosberg, Joseph Cohen; song, America, school.

An interesting talk upon the early life of Lincoln was given by Rev. Dr. M. B. Kaufman, who was born in Decatur, Ill., about forty miles from Springfield, where Lincoln was practicing law at the time of his election. Dr. Kaufman, with some other boys, went to the station to see him when the train that bore him to his inauguration at Washington passed through the town, and one of his most cherisned memories is that of the tall, gaunt, kindly faced man, who bowed so pleasantly to the crowd who assembled to greet him. As was natural, his name was on every tongue, and Dr. Kaufman told many anecdotes illustrative of his honesty, his tenderness and sympathy with all suffering, and his unselfish thought for others. Even when burdened by the nation's cares his was a character to love and reverence, and in so far as possible to imitate.

ART STUDENTS' ASSOCIATION Holds Unusually Interesting Meeting Topic, Roman Architecture.

One of the most interesting meetings of the Art Students' association was held Monday evening in the library at Slater Memorial hall. Miss Mary Alken presided and gave a comprehensive and informing talk on Roman architecture, the subject of the meeting. This was followed by interesting papers by Mrs. F. W. Lester on Temples, Miss Fisher on Arches and Columns, Miss Louise Howe on Theaters and Amphitheaters, Mrs. R. W. Kimball on Baths, and Miss Mary C. Lucas on Palaces.

AT POLI'S. The Little Gray Lady.

A most enthuslastic reception was given Miss Victoria Montgomery at Poll's Monday afternoon and evening, the theater being packed at both performances. It was her first appearance before a local audience and it was a most complimentary reception. Her work throughout, though hampered by a cold, was of the best, and brought forth rounds of applause. In the evening, following the third act, the appreciation of the audience and friends was manifested by a number of bouquets and baskets of flowers which were presented Miss Montgomery, following a curtain call. That the half-dozen floral remembrances, including one in behalf of the Owls, who were present in a body, were a great surprise to Miss Montgomery, was manifest to all in attendance. They were thoropythly appreciated.

As leading woman of the Poll Players, Miss Montgomery made a most favorable impression in the role of Anna Gray. She entered into the life of the play with earnestness and feeling and displayed her clever ability in a manner which made it manifest to the audience that Manager Rusk has secured a player of exceptional merit in Miss Montgomery. Sue Fisher and Virginia Chauvenet added to the proper touch to the roles which they assumed and received full recognition for their efforts, Emma Hayner, as usual, was fine, while Gertrude Morgan also pleased. Robert LeScuer as Perryton Carlyle, gave an interpretation of that role which was well done throughout, while S. F. Cairns as the secret service man played that part with his clever and characteristic ability. Laurence Dumbar as Graham was decidedly good, while J. A. Robbi and Farrell McKnight contributed to the merriment. J. H. Booth and Harry Sedley looked well after their parts, the merriment. J. H. Booth and Harry Sedley looked well after their parts, while William Barrows as the treasury guard carries his thinking part to perfection.

The first in a series of popular evenings under the management of the social committee of the Y. M. C. A. was held Monday evening, when it was impossible to accommodate all who desired to attend. Many were obliged to stand throughout the evening. The Weber Male quartette of Boston was the attraction and they delighted the large audience, each number being finely given, and encore after encore was demanded and freely given. Assisting them was Rev. D. B. MacLane of Norwich, whose masterly handling of the violin called forth rounds of applause, and he was likewise obliged to respond to ancores in each instance.

Taken to the Pumping Station, Where He Was Shown What is Needed.

The board of water commissioners is still conducting its investigation in regard to which is the best and quickest filter to secure for the pumping station. Alfred G. Doe, now of Roston, but formerly manager of the local ball team, was here on Monday and with Superintendent Corkery visited the pumping station, where the needs of the department were explained to him. He represents a filter concern and would like to bid on the local proposition, but, like other filter representatives, he had little to offer in the shape of a temporary filter, such improvements being considered a permanent thing.

What till now has been rumor, and scoffed at accordingly, is now accepted as a settled thing, says the New Haven Register. The idea of a great transatiantic steamship terminal at the east point of Long Island has advanced several distinct stages since the first of last week. They tell confidentity now—they even show maps—of great plers laid out on Fort Pond bay, which has one of the best harbors on the coast.
